Detailed description of content	In this course, we explore the role of radical alternatives and utopian thinking in a world that is desperate to solve the accumulated problems that it has created for itself. We examine the politics, theory, worldviews and practices related to a wide set of initiatives around the world that seek radical alternatives to the currently dominant processes of globalized development. By organizing economic and social activity around principles such as solidarity and cooperation, such alternatives challenge a modernist ontology of universal solutions in favor of a multiplicity of possible worlds. The struggles for alternative forms of social and economic organisation led by indigenous groups, eco-village networks, landless peasants and other subaltern groups provide a much needed critique, contributing to decolonizing and invigorating debates about how we can organize work, production, consumption and societies more broadly in a manner which respects ecological boundaries while building on principles of solidarity and cooperation. Portfolio Assignment 1 – conceptually / theoretically based paper Identify two different conceptualizations of alternative modes of organizing society (locally or globally). Discuss the two concepts against each other and argue how they challenge existing orders and how they provide alternatives. You are expected to reference at least 5 readings from the course. In the assignment, you need to present your own argument. This could e.g. be <ul style="list-style-type: none">• As juxtaposition of different perspectives/theories• A discussion of congruence or mismatch between concepts and the way they promote alternative orders• A discussion of the underlying perspective of one or more of the articles you're using Format: max. 12.000 characters, including spaces Assignment 2 – paper based on a concrete case of an alternative mode of organizing Assignment 2 has two connected parts, a group work case study and an individual paper a) Group work case study – case of alternative organizing <ul style="list-style-type: none">• In groups, identify and research a case• Objective: Apply (some of the) concepts we discuss in the course. This is also a good exercise for research techniques.• Workshop – short presentations by each group (main findings/ issues/ problems) b) An individual exam paper. Use the group case study as a starting point for an individual academic discussion paper. In your discussion, you must reflect on the notion of development in relation to your case and how established ideas of development are challenged or rethought. You are expected to use at least 5 readings from the course.
