Registration	You register for activities through stads selvbetjening during the announced registration period, which you can see on the Study administration homepage. When registering for courses, please be aware of the potential conflicts and overlaps between course and exam time and dates. The planning of course activities at Roskilde University is based on the recommended study programmes, which should not overlap. However, if you choose optional courses and/or study plans that goes beyond the recommended study programmes, an overlap of lectures or exam dates may occur depending on which courses you choose. In case of too few registrations, the course will be cancelled.
Detailed description of content	The contours of industrial competitiveness are now increasingly defined by the outlines of international production networks and less so by the boundaries of nations. Production of goods and services is fragmented and spatially dispersed and is governed by lead firms that coordinate the activities of a myriad of suppliers and sub-suppliers worldwide. From a broader perspective, however, GVC governance is also shaped by actors that do not directly produce, transform, handle or trade products and services – such as civil society organizations, trade unions, consumer groups, networks of experts and policymakers, industry groups and multistakeholder initiatives. GVCs have opened up new opportunities for developing countries to participate in the global economy, but have also heightened the related risks and uncertainty of doing so. GVC participation per se does not lead to inclusive development outcomes unless increasing shares of value added are created and captured domestically and are fairly distributed among different social groups. Covid-19 revealed the extent to which countries around the world depend on global value chains for employment, production and consumption, sparking debates over the positive and negative aspects of the dependence and whether global production should be reconfigured. The Global Value Chains course examines these pressing issues of the contemporary global economy, from the perspective of developed, emerging and less developed countries. In Assignment 1, students are asked to map and measure the position of a specific country in a specific GVC of their own choice, using the tools taught in class 3. It should be no more than 4 pages (7200 characters = 4 x 1800 characters per page). More details are in the course syllabus on Moodle. In Assignment 2, students are asked to conduct the following analysis: (1) identify the dominant governance structure in their chosen GVC and discuss how it relates to lead firm strategies and supplier capabilities, and then elaborate in their chosen country specific context; (2) Identify and discuss the developmental outcomes in their chosen country from participation in this GVC, in terms of firm level economic and social upgrading as well as broader implications for the domestic economy; and (3) Discuss the causal drivers between lead firm strategies, governance structure and developmental outcomes, in which it is possible to bring in other variables such as host government policies, NGO activities, and worker actions. Assignment 2 should be no more than 12 pages (21600 characters), including list of references. There is no need for a title page, abstract or table of contents.
Expected work effort (ECTS-declaration)	10 ECTS x 27 hours = 270 hours Estimated: 13 lectures x 2 = 26 hours; Group work and other activities = 40; Preparation for class 13 x 6 = 78; Preparation for the Exam and Exam = 126

- Regionalisation and regional integration in international politics
- International security
- International law and human rights

Global Sociology:

- International Mobility and information flow
- International political movements and social change
- International civil society, law and defence
- Contentious identities and new global actors

Global Political Economy:

- Work and globalization
- Natural resources and geopolitics
- Trade, investment and global production networks
- International Financial Economics

Teaching and working methods

The courses are based on lectures, but will also include other teaching and working methods such as group work, exercises, student presentations, peer feedback and field trips or guest lectures as well as other practical activities.

Type of activity

Elective course

Form of examination
(p1)

Individual written portfolio.

The portfolio consists of 2 written products, that wholly or partially are developed during the course. For example, products can be exercise responses, speech papers for presentations, written feedback, reflection, written assignments. The preparation of the products may be subject to time limits.

The character limit: maximum 28,800 characters, including spaces.

The character limits include the cover, table of contents, bibliography, figures and other illustrations, but exclude any appendices.

The portfolio's specific products and the (if relevant) recommended size (character limit) for the individual products are made public on study.ruc.dk before the course begins.

The entire portfolio must be handed in at the same time.
The submission deadline will be public on study.ruc.dk before the course begins.

The assessment is individual and based on the entire portfolio.

Assessment: 7-point grading scale.

Form of Re-examination (p1)
