ACADEMIC CONTENT

The course focuses on the role and position of the civil servant who either operates in an international environment or deals with international issues and problems at national or local levels. The course provides an in-depth understanding on how the international civil servant changes roles across different policy areas or levels of decision-making (local, national, regional, international) and thus acts as a manager, an executive, and a diplomat. This requires that the civil servant develops certain capacities and communication skill that differ from those of the national civil servant. Important questions addressed in the course are: Who are the people behind institutions and collective actors in international policymaking? Which qualifications do they have, and which do they acquire? What challenges and opportunities they face?

Overall objective

For this purpose, the course introduces theories and concepts on how we study the bureaucracy at both the national and international level. The course includes International Public Administration and Organisation theories, International Politics, diplomacy, and current advances and challenges in the study of international public servants. Moreover, the course provides methodological tools and practical knowledge in writing for a policy audience (e.g. writing policy briefs).

The teaching consists primarily of lectures with the continuous interaction and involvement of the students in discussions and in the resolution of minor tasks. During the semester, the students must prepare one obligatory written assignments.

In addition, a full-day interdisciplinary workshop is included with the other two courses of the semester.
